Contributors

BARRY DAVIS is manager of interpretive services for the Ballarat Historical Park Association at Sovereign Hill, Ballarat.

PETER MacFIE is an historian and former teacher who has worked most recently with the Port Arthur Conservation and Development Project, Tasmania. He is a councillor for the Tasmanian branch of the National Trust.

PETER McCarthy is senior lecturer in mining engineering at the Ballarat College of Advanced Education. He is on the Board of the Ballarat Historical Park Association.

PETER MILNER is senior lecturer in the Department of Mechanical and Industrial Engineering at the University of Melbourne. He is studying the elements of the history of Australian technology because of his interest in the art of engineering.

JOHN MOYNIHAN is supervising engineer for Telecom Australia in Western Australia. He has a long-standing interest in the history of his state and of its telecommunications industry.

RAY PROUDLEY studied history and economics at La Trobe University. Currently he is working on a history of the gas industry in Victoria for the Gas and Fuel Corporation.

ANDREW WARD is a Melbourne-based architect who specialises in historic buildings. His particular interest is railway architecture.