Contributors

JOAN DOMICELJ is a former Australian Heritage Commissioner who now works as an assessor in the New South Wales Land and Environment Court.

PETER DONOVAN is a consultant historian based in Adelaide, and active in conservation matters.

JOHN ELLIS is an Adelaide planning consultant and former chairman of the maritime branch of the National Trust of Australia (South Australia).

DONALD ELLSMORE is a conservation architect with the New South Wales Government Architects Branch.

GRACE KARSKENS is a New South Wales subscriber to Historic Environment.

ANNE LATREILLE is a Melbourne-based freelance writer, and Garden Editor of The Age.

MILES LEWIS is an architectural historian at the University of Melbourne. He is the author of Victorian Primitive (1977), Don John of Balclava (1977) and co-author of The Essential Maldon (1983).

BRUCE PENNAY, principal lecturer in Australian history at the Riverina/Murray Institute of Higher Education, has worked as consultant historian for heritage studies in Goulburn and Albury. Currently he is executive officer of the Post-School Education Council in Albury/Wodonga.

MICHAEL SCOTT is Manager, City Strategic Planning, City of Melbourne. His town planning qualifications are from South Bank Polytechnic in England, and he has worked as team leader of the Geelong Bike Plan.