LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

TYRONE LANDAU is a graduate of the Courtauld Institute in London, and an art historian who works in London for the fine art house, Fischer - for which firm he prepared the catalogue for a recent exhibition of Butterfield's work. The paper from which this article is abridged was written during a recent visit to Australia.

TOM HAZELL is the protocol officer at the University of Melbourne, a councillor of the National Trust of Australia (Victoria) and the National Trust's nominee on the Historic Buildings Council. He became interested in William Wardell and his work through association with people who had known him.

PETER DONOVAN has a Master of Arts degree from Flinders University and specialises in South Australian history. His most recent publication is A Land Full of Possibilities: A History of South Australia's Northern Territory. He has undertaken a number of urban conservation studies in South Australia.