Notes on Contributors

Jason Ardler has over 15 years experience with the NSW National Parks and Wildlife Service and is currently the Director, Cultural Heritage, responsible for leading the Service's management of historic assets within the reserve system and Aboriginal heritage across the NSW landscape. Jason represents the NPWS on the NSW Heritage council and is also a member of the NSW Reconciliation Council. Jason is a Yuin person of the NSW south coast.

Warwick R Baird BA LLB(Syd) LLM (UNSW) is a legal consultant specialising in heritage protection and environmental law and Indigenous people. He has many years experience working with Aboriginal people throughout NSW in relation to protecting sacred sites, land claims and native title. He has worked as the Registrar of the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) and in that capacity was responsible for instigating the process leading to the transfer of Biamanga National Park and Gulaga National Park to Indigenous communities. Recently he was the author of A Guide to the Aboriginal Ownership and Joint Management of Land in NSW. He is also a keen mountaineer and frequent visitor to the Australian Alps.

Margie Coffin Brown is a historical landscape architect with the Olmsted Center for Landscape Preservation within the U. S. National Park Service. For the past seven years, Ms Brown has worked with the staff at Acadia National Park in Maine to develop a cultural landscape report for the historic hiking trail system. In 2000 she received an Albright-Wirth Grant to research historic trail construction in the United States and to prepare historic trail rehabilitation guidelines. As coordinator for a trail conference held at Acadia National Park, she edited the proceedings entitled, Preserving Historic Trails. She holds a Master’s degree in landscape architecture from the Harvard University Graduate School of Design and received a Communications Merit Award from the American Society of Landscape Architects for her co-authored publication, Guide to Developing a Preservation Maintenance Plan for a Historic Landscape.

Margret J. Doring and her whole family have a lifelong involvement with skiing. Margret is a builder and civil engineer and studied architectural conservation at ICCROM in Rome, in 1983, spending all her free time in Austria - skiing at Zürs. After returning she worked for the NSW Heritage Council until 1990, when she joined Carl Doring (a fellow skier) as a heritage consultant. They now live in north-east Victoria, within sight of many of their favourite mountains.

doring.belgrano@bigpond.com

Serge Domicelj FAPI, is Emeritus Professor of Conservation Planning (Sydney University) and President of the International Society of City and Regional Planning (the Hague). His professional work has focused on urban planning in developing societies, the urban environment and heritage conservation and post-graduate training in these fields. He has been over many years, a consultant to international agencies, including UNESCO, ESCAP, ECLAC and ICCROM.

domicelj@hermes.net.au

Brian Egloff is Associate Professor of Cultural Heritage Studies and a Member of the Cultural Heritage Research Centre at the University of Canberra. He has worked on Indigenous land rights for more than twenty years and advised the Commonwealth Government on the return of Jervis Bay National Park to the Wreck Bay Aboriginal Community Council. Brian was a member of the expert advisory group for the Tasmania and Western Australia Regional Forest Agreements. He is president of the ICOMOS International Committee for Archaeological Heritage Management. Recently he worked with the Office of the Registrar (NSW Land Rights Act) on the return of Biamanga and Gulaga National Parks to Indigenous communities.

egloff@scides.canberra.edu.au

Alistair Grinbergs Bachelor of Arts (Honours), Grad. Dip. Applied Science is the Principal of Alistair Grinbergs Heritage Solutions. Alistair has worked professionally across the three heritage environments (natural, historic and Indigenous) for over a decade. Areas of interest include integrated heritage management, the heritage of the Australian Alps and Australia's involvement in Antarctica.

Rob Kaufman works as a Heritage Consultant and is based in Bright, Victoria, at the foot for the Victorian Alps. He has completed Conservation Management Plans and other reports for many important heritage places throughout Victoria, specialising in industrial heritage, and particularly mining. He has also undertaken several strategic tourism reports, and recently prepared the Australian Alps Mining Heritage Conservation & Presentation Strategy, funded by the AALC.

Rachel Lenehan has an Honours BA (Arch) from the Flinders University of Adelaide. In 2000 Rachel was employed by the Office of the Registrar, Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) to coordinate the Register of Aboriginal Owners of land. In previous years Rachel has worked for the NSW Aboriginal Land Council as the coordinator of the Ancestral Remains Project, facilitating the repatriation of Aboriginal cultural material to NSW Aboriginal communities, and as a research officer for an Indigenous Land Corporation (ILC) Land Needs Project run by the Council. Rachel has also undertaken archaeological consultancies for the public and private sector.

historic environment volume 17 number 2 2003
Jane Lennon established a heritage consultancy in Brisbane in 1993. She has a long involvement with heritage conservation in National Parks, forests, coasts, goldfields, inner urban areas and museums as a Victorian public servant (1973-93) and as a member of numerous professional and community associations. She has an MA (Hons) from the University of Melbourne. She was a member of the cultural heritage working group of the Alps Liaison Committee form its inception and has continued to work with the group on various projects from ranger training to cultural landscape management guidelines. She is currently an elected member of the Council of the International Centre for the study of the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property in Rome (ICCCROM), an adjunct professor in Cultural Heritage Studies at Deakin University and an Australian Heritage Commissioner, representing the Commission on the Kingston-Arthur Vale management Board for Norfolk Island. Jane's most recent work has involved project for the Queensland Heritage Trails network, the heritage chapter for the Australian State of Environment report 2001, World Heritage property management strategies and writing the management guidelines for World Heritage cultural landscapes.

Eva Logan After completing a Bachelor of Applied Science in Cultural Heritage Management in 1998 at the University of Canberra, Eva travelled overseas and undertook a postgraduate diploma course in Cultural Landscape Management at the University of Wales, Lampeter. She completed a Master of Arts with the assistance of a grant awarded by the Foundation (formerly Queens Trust) for Young Australians. Her cultural landscape thesis was based on fieldwork in Wales and Australia. She has worked for the Australian Department of Environment and Heritage and is now working for the Attorney-General’s Department.

Katrina McDougall is an historian and partner in McDougall & Vines, Conservation and Heritage Consultants, Adelaide. She is a long-standing member of ICOMOS and currently Vice President of the National Trust of South Australia, and Chair of its Heritage Advisory Committee.

Susan Marsden is President of the Professional Historians Association (SA), partner with Roslyn Russell in Marsden Russell Historians, and a member of the ACT Historic Properties Advisory Committee.

Michael Pearson is a consultant historical archaeologist and heritage conservation planner with thirty year's experience in NSW National Parks and Wildlife Service, the Australian Heritage Commission, and as head of Heritage Management Consultants. He is a former Chair of Australia ICOMOS, and currently member of the ICOMOS International Polar Heritage Committee. He is Deputy Chair of the ACT Heritage Council, and Adjunct Professor of Cultural Heritage Management at University of Canberra. Michael has over 70 published articles and monographs, including Looking after heritage places (with Sharon Sullivan, MUP 1995) which is in its fourth reprinting and an updated edition is being prepared.

Juliet Ramsay is a senior conservation officer with the Australian Heritage Commission. She has a background in landscape architecture and is the Australia ICOMOS representative to the International Committee for Historic Gardens – Cultural Landscapes.

Anita Smith is an ARC Post-Doctoral Fellow and Lecturer in Heritage and Sustainable Cultural Tourism in the Cultural Heritage Centre for Asia and the Pacific, Deakin University, Melbourne.

Diane Strand is a member of the Crow Clan of the Champagne and Aishihik First Nationals (CAFN) located in the southwest Yukon and northwestern British Columbia. She is employed as Heritage Officer for her First Nation government. A grand-daughter of well-known Yukon Elder, the late Mrs Annie Ned, Diane is of Southern Tutchone and Norwegian cultural background. She has a diploma in Business Administration from Yukon College and has been employed with her First nation since 1996 working on implementing the Land Claim Agreement. Diane is one of three CAFN representative on the Kwatay Dan Ts'inchi Management Group, a joint British Columbia Government and CAFN government team that oversees matters related to the ‘long ago person’ found in 1999 on a glacier in Tatshenshini-Alexe Park. Diane has also been involved in the Ice Patch research work since 1997 representing her First Nation. Diane, her husband and two children live in Haines Junction, beside Kluane National Park, in the beautiful southwest Yukon.

Marilyn Truscott is a heritage practitioner and archaeologist, with training in history and materials conservation. With field experience in the Middle East, Europe, and in Australia on historic and Indigenous archaeological heritage, she has worked for some 30 years as a museum curator, state and Commonwealth heritage officer, and as a consultant, including on mountain huts for Parks Victoria in 2001. Marilyn is a recent Past President of Australia ICOMOS. She is currently undertaking doctoral research in issues related to archaeology, heritage and community participation, described as ‘community archaeology’, at the University of Canberra.

Linda Young teaches aspects of Cultural Heritage Management at the University of Canberra.