Notes on Contributors

Dr Neville Agnew is principal project specialist at the Getty Conservation Institute. He came to the Getty from the Queensland Museum, Australia, where he had headed the conservation department. He has led and participated in many of the international conservation projects of the Institute, including in China where he has worked continuously since 1989 under an agreement with the State Administration of Cultural Heritage. In 2000 he received the Friendship Award and in 2006 the International Collaboration Award from the People’s Republic of China.
NAgnew@getty.edu

Kirsty Altenburg joined the former Australian Heritage Commission (AHC) in 1995 and now works for its successor, the Department of the Environment and Heritage, assessing heritage places and providing advice on cultural heritage management. She has worked with the AHC, the Chinese State Administration for Cultural Heritage and the Getty Conservation Institute on the China Principles project, developing and applying national guidelines for conservation and management of cultural heritage sites in China.
Kirsty.Altenburg@deh.gov.au

Dr Eleanor Conlin Casella is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Arts, Histories & Cultures at the University of Manchester, UK. She has worked in Australian archaeology since 1992, and is director of an on-going excavation project at the Ross Female Factory historic site in Tasmania.
e.casella@manchester.ac.uk

Aedeen Cremin is currently a Visiting Fellow in the School of Archaeology and Anthropology at the Australian National University and is a team leader for the University of Sydney’s Greater Angkor Project. She has been general editor of this journal since 2002.
aedenc@bigpond.com

Dr Martha Demas joined the Getty Conservation Institute in 1990, where she has worked on the development of training courses and undertaken research and publication in conservation and management of archaeological sites, and managed conservation field projects in Central America, Africa, the Middle East, China and the U.S. She is currently a Senior Project Specialist at the GCI and has participated in the China Principles project since its inception in 1997.
MDemas@getty.edu

Lynne Dore has an Honours degree in Archaeology and is currently undertaking postgraduate research on heritage war sites as tourism destinations at La Trobe University. She has been a consulting archaeologist in Victoria and has participated in numerous surveys and excavations, including one in North Vietnam in 1996. She has published material on battlefield archaeology and regional tourism and has also worked as a community facilitator.
pldore@iprimus.com.au

Dr Brian Egloff is on long-service leave, pending retirement, from the University of Canberra where he is an Associate Professor of Cultural Heritage Studies.
Brian.Egloff@canberra.edu.au

Derek Hallam is a project manager who has long been involved with risk management and disaster preparedness of general and heritage buildings in the tertiary education sector.

John H. Jameson Jr. is Program Manager, Archeology Education and Interpretation, with the U.S. National Park Service’s Southeast Archaeological Center in Tallahassee, Florida. An internationally recognised leader in public archaeology, he has developed training courses and workshops for park rangers, educators, and archaeologists on the effective interpretation of archaeological and cultural heritage.
jjhjameson@yahoo.com

Dr Jane Lennon AM, a founding member of Australia ICOMOS, is a Brisbane based consultant and currently a member of the Australian Heritage Council. She has a long association with Port Arthur – her M.A. thesis discussed trade to Tasman Peninsula for the convict commissariat, she prepared the Broad Arrow Café conservation management plan, and was the Australian representative on the Getty Conservation Institute values-based management project for which Port Arthur was the Australian case study.
jlennon@petrie.hotkey.net.au

Professor David Lung is the Founding Director of the Architectural Conservation Programme at Hong Kong University and vice chairman of ICOMOS/China. He has served as a member of the UNESCO Asian Heritage award judging panel, consultant to World Bank on heritage conservation projects and headed research teams in drafting applications for World Heritage Listings for Macao and Kaiping, China.
dplyung@hkucc.hku.hk
Dr Susan Marsden is a consultant historian, President of the Association of Professional Historians (SA), and a member of the SA Heritage Council's Register Committee. She has published several urban histories and heritage studies, most recently (with Carol Cosgrove) Challenging times: The National Trust of South Australia 1955–2005, National Trust of SA, Adelaide, 2005
smarsden@ozemail.com.au

Dr Angel David Nieves is an Assistant Professor in the School of Architecture, Planning, and Preservation at the University of Maryland at College Park, USA. He is currently documenting community-based heritage conservation efforts in Cape Town and Johannesburg as part of a larger study of the intersections between nationalism and heritage preservation in its former all-Black townships.
anieves@umd.edu

Dr Celmara Pocock is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in cultural heritage tourism at the University of Tasmania. She is also theme leader for cultural heritage tourism for the STORC and responsible for the development of a national cultural heritage tourism research strategy. Her research interests and associated publications include social significance, environmental anthropology and sense of place. Celmara has previously worked as a cultural heritage manager for community organisations, state and commonwealth governments.
Celmara.Pocock@utas.edu.au

Peter Romey is a Senior Associate with Sydney heritage consulting firm Godden Mackay Logan and has been working in the heritage conservation field for over 25 years. From 1999 to 2006, he was a Director, Conservation and Infrastructure at the Port Arthur Historic Site in Tasmania, responsible for the conservation of a cultural site of international significance. Peter is currently the Vice-President of Australia ICOMOS.
peter@gml.com.au

Dr. Peter Stone is Professor of Heritage Studies in the International Centre for Cultural and Heritage Studies at Newcastle University in the UK. Peter has worked for English Heritage, in universities, and as a consultant specialising in management, education, and interpretation through UNESCO, the World Bank, the European Union, and the British Council. Peter is Honorary Chief Executive Officer of the World Archaeological Congress, a member of the Culture Committee of the UK National Commission for UNESCO, and Chair of the Hadrian's Wall World Heritage Site Management Plan Committee.
P.G.Stone@newcastle.ac.uk

Professor Sharon Sullivan is Deputy Chair of the Port Arthur Historic Site Management Authority and a past Chair of the National Cultural Heritage Forum. She is a consultant for the Australian and Chinese Governments, World Bank, World Monuments Fund and Getty Conservation Institute. Sharon is Adjunct Professor, University of Queensland and James Cook University, Fellow of the Academy of Humanities, member of Australia ICOMOS Executive and AIATSIS.
redbank@hotkey.net.au

Marilyn Truscott is an archaeologist and past President of Australia ICOMOS, formerly working at the state and federal levels of government in both museums and heritage agencies, including the Australian Heritage Commission. She is now working as a heritage consultant on both Indigenous and historic Australian heritage places and internationally on world heritage. She is a member of the new ICOMOS International Committee on Intangible Cultural Heritage, the ICOMOS International Publications Committee and an associate member of the ICOMOS International Scientific Committee on Archaeological Heritage Management.
mct_oz@bigpond.net.au

Nolubabalo Tongo has worked as a Researcher at Robben Island Museum in the Heritage and Environmental Management Department in South Africa since June 1999. She completed a BA Degree in 1997 and BA Honours in Psychology in 1998 at University of the Western Cape. She completed a collaborative Post Graduate Diploma in Museums and Heritage Studies in 2005, and currently she is doing a M.Phil in Cultural Tourism and Heritage Studies at the University of Stellenbosch.
NolubabaloT@robben-island.org.za

Louise Zarmati is an archaeologist and educator. She has written several high-school textbooks, most recently Heineman Ancient and Medieval History: Pompeii and Herculaneum (2005). In 2006 she was the recipient of a Premier's Westfield History award and is currently working on a biography of the Italian archaeologist Amedeo Maiuri.
lzarmati@unwired.com.au