Kristal Buckley is an archaeologist and heritage consultant in private practice based in Melbourne, Australia. She is a Vice-President of ICOMOS, Chair of Australia's National Cultural Heritage Forum, and a member of the Heritage Council of Victoria. She is also Chair of the Conservation Advisory Committee for the Port Arthur Historic Site and has conducted consultations which explore the contemporary community heritage values of both Indigenous and non-Indigenous cultural heritage places in Australia.

Email: kristal.buckley@gmail.com

Brian J. Egloff PhD is the President of ICAHM (International Committee for Archaeological Heritage Management) of International ICOMOS and has an academic background in both anthropology and historical archaeology. He is the Adjunct Associate Professor of Cultural Heritage Studies at the University of Canberra. His work has taken him from his genesis in the United States to various places in the Pacific including Papua New Guinea and then to Laos and throughout Australia, with a particular focus on indigenous communities and heritage conservation project management. Brian’s two most recent works are Bones of the Ancestors: The Ambum Stone: From the New Guinea Highlands to the Antiquities Market to Australia (Altamira Press, 2008) and Bamanga and Guluga: Aboriginal Cultural Association with Nicolas Peterson and Sue Wesson (Office of the Registrar, 2004). As a visiting scholar at the Getty Conservation Institute he commenced working on international guidelines for archaeological heritage management.

Email: brian.egloff@canberra.edu.au

Jane Harrington PhD has a professional background in cultural heritage spanning over 15 years. Working in heritage management, and community heritage, her main research interests are intangible heritage – particularly traditional practices, uses, place attachments – and the relationships between communities and world heritage. She has worked with community projects in Australia, England, Thailand and Cambodia. She is currently the Director of Conservation and Infrastructure with the Port Arthur Historic Site Management Authority.

Email: jane.harrington@portarthur.org.au

Dougald O’Reilly PhD researches the development of political complexity in Bronze and Iron Age Thailand. He lived in Cambodia from 1999, working as a UNESCO lecturer at the Royal University of Fine Arts in Phnom Penh. Whilst there O’Reilly led the excavation of an Iron Age site, Phum Snay, located in the north west of Cambodia. The site had been extensively looted by locals prior to its archaeological excavation a trend that expanded to nearly all known prehistoric sites in the region. In response to the looting, a non-governmental organization called HeritageWatch was founded by the author in an effort to combat the loss of heritage in Cambodia. O’Reilly is a Lecturer in archaeology with the University of Sydney.

Email: director@heritagewatch.org

John Pickard PhD is an eclectic naturalist who is fascinated by landscapes. During a varied career he has studied the impact of Europeans on Australian landscapes, and for the past decade, Australian rural fences. His program has taken him all over Australia measuring fences to create a database of over 5000 sites which he is currently analysing. Allied components of the program involve collating all Australian fence-related patents as a basis for a proposed identification guide. Much of his work involves heritage management of old fences. He is currently in the Department of Physical Geography, Macquarie University.

Email: john.pickard@bigpond.com

Anita Smith PhD is a Charles La Trobe Research Fellow in Archaeology at Latrobe University, Melbourne. Her primary research interests are the archaeology, history and heritage of the Pacific Islands where has conducted a number of cultural heritage and capacity building projects for UNESCO and the World Heritage Centre. She is currently a member of the Australian delegation to the World Heritage Committee.

Email: anitas100@hotmail.com