It is said that in the near future 55% of architects' work will be to existing buildings: these Professional Development seminars consider the important work of the architect in bringing new roles and new life to existing structures - all part of a sustainable agenda. The seminars will show relevant examples of adaptive re-use, and also of new architecture in historic precincts, and will discuss the principles behind their success.

The seminar will cover the following:

- Existing Heritage Listings & Relevant Statutory Controls – and what architects should know
- Conservation Principles – the Conservation Plan Process, and use of specialist heritage architects
- Adaptive Reuse, Alterations and Additions – including the principle of Reversibility
- New Development In Heritage Areas – the importance of appropriately designed infill
- Council Approvals Process
- Heritage Incentives and Funding opportunities
- Discussion of conservation challenges, threats and obstacles
- A forum of local architects to present current projects with opportunity for questions.
